Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Dental Practitioner and Advertiser, Vol. 23 The following is a practical sequel of that paper, rendered in popular language, so far as it is possible to convey the intended meaning. The plan laid before you consists in naming some of the most distinguishing conditions of tooth structure, as seen in general practice, with scientific suggestions as to the proper filling material to meet each condition. By the teachings of science effects may be anticipated, and thus a saving of experimentation secured. For an illustration, let us consider the two extreme conditions of dentine found in the mouth - the normal, and the lowest grade of poorly calcified structure. The analysis of dentine, as given in chemistry, is sufficiently correct for our purpose, and this indicates twenty-eight parts of organic matter in one hundred. This is the life principle of the tooth, and when unguarded by the mineral constituents which make up the remainder of a normal tooth structure, is in this abnormal condition a conductor of the electric current, and subject to electrical decomposition. When protected by the lime salts, conductivity decomposition and sensibility are so diminished that no harm arises from either of them. As the density of dentine falls below the normal standard, the conditions are favorable for disturbances from any one or all of the three causes mentioned. Time and practice prove that teeth of normal density may be filled with any material which will make a durable and perfectly fitting plug, and all the requirements for tooth preservation will be secured. The material is yet to be discovered which, for durability, the restoration of contour and in popular appreciation, will favorably...
