Reviews

This publication might be well worth a read, and much better than other. It really is simplified but excitement inside the 50 % of the book. You will not feel monotony at whenever you want of the time (that's what catalogues are for concerning when you check with me).

Upon the principle of mathematical precision laid down in No. 9 of this Section, all echelon formations should, strictly speaking, be made by the previous wheel of divisions into echelon, upon a halted pivot, in order that the leading flanks may stand precisely perpendicular to the direction in which they are to form. This is the general rule: --But as expedition is the first object, when it is easily attainable without risking confusion, in battalion practice, when not liable to be attacked during the formation, the bringing forward of the shoulders may be adopted on special occasions, the commanding officer taking care to give the word Forward, at the very moment when the leading flanks are in a perpendicular direction to the point of appui in the new line. 18. The march in echelon will be, generally, in quick time, as changes of position in echelon are always supposed to be near an enemy, where the utmost regularity and constant opportunity to form line must be preserved--it would not therefore be prudent to attempt greater celerity than quick time. 19. Rapid formations to line, however, from column or square upon any fixed part of a battalion, when made by the echelon movements of subdivisions or sections, may be performed at the double march: or in echelon changes of position, when two or three divisions remain to be formed on the flank, they may complete the formation at the double march. 20. In all...
