Excerpt: . . . remark, so that it came to his ears; maybe it was intended that it should. No, he said to himself, I am not more fond of my adopted sister than a brother should be. I have, though, that much fondness for her, I hope. Just then the girl chanced to pass, and the man looked down into her sweet, fair face, about which the golden-red hair of Berenice hung in wavy clouds. And then as he looked down into the depths of the tender eyes, and saw how fair she was and good and pure; and remembering her sunny temper and grave simplicity, he felt that it was pleasant to have this beautiful woman near him; that her grace and youth and wisdom made all stories of knight-errantry possible and true; that her purity and simple truth helped his faith in mankind, and threw...
