Excerpt from Through the Wilderness to Richmond: A Paper Read Before the Ohio Commandery of the Loyal Legion of the United States The cavalry of the Army of the Potomac never set out upon a campaign in lighter marching order than that of 1864, when it took up the march toward Richmond. One wagon to a regiment and two lead horses to each company constituted the transportation equipment. It was generally realized by the troops that a campaign of unusual severity was before them; hence, every man put as little burden upon himself and horse as possible, carrying nothing that he could do without. If one had a preference for a blanket, he left behind his overcoat; or, if the overcoat was thought indispensable, the blanket was thrown out. Cooking utensils were commonly reduced to a pint tincup and a half of a canteen, which latter, with a stick split at one end for a handle, served for a frying and stewing pan. Yet some, who were likely to mourn for the flesh pots of Egypt in...
